Morning Humor

"You just go ahead," the man in the shopping mall said to his wife. "While you're shopping, I'll browse in the hardware store." An hour later, she returned and saw him at the checkout counter. The clerk was ringing up the last of a pile of tools and supplies that would fill two wheelbarrows. "Are you buying all this?" his wife asked incredulously. "Well, yes," he said, embarrassed. Then waving his arm toward the interior of the store, he added, "But look at all the stuff I'm leaving behind!"

My Grandpa used to sit in a rocking chair. He had a recliner, but didn't use it because it wasn't comfortable for him. So one night when we were over there, Dad tried putting shims under the recliner feet to change the angle, to see if that would make it better for him. While we were doing that, Grandma was rummaging around in the closet and knocked over a box of marbles. That is forever stuck in my mind as the night Grandpa was off his rocker and Grandma lost her marbles.

"I want to divorce my wife."

"On what grounds?"

"She is out all night, every night, going from bar to bar."

"Are you saying she's an alcoholic or do you think she's cheating?"

"No, she is looking for me."

I saw my son eating chocolate even after I confiscated all his Halloween candy. I asked him where he got that from. He said, "I always have a few Twix up my sleeve."

Yes, it's happening! Our committee on Christmas at the End of the Road met Friday and while there were lots of different ideas on how it should work, every member was in favor of going ahead with the event. People are checking on locations for the pictures and we may offer options as to how you get your pictures (maybe by email this year). Key Club will be involved and depending on the location we choose, you will walk away with a candy cane and maybe a hot chocolate. I'm ready.

Before our crew got into clean up and beautify mode, this is the area behind the ballfield where we will be helping build the Family Activity Park.

After the brush cutters did their part and the painters applied 25 gallons of paint, we have a nice start on our project.
